A partnership with cable providers, along with an ambitious slate of original series, would put Netflix one step closer to competing with premium cable channels, like HBO, Showtime and Starz, that offer original series and movies for a monthly fee. This partnership with many leading companies offers Netflix with popular mediums of customer reach like Xbox, internet and mobile applications. In the future it can form alliances with schools and educational institutions to promote educational contents. Partnership with movie companies inspired Netflix to produce its own television series House of Cards which was very successful and generated a unique position for Netflix. Netflix original production The Square was nominated for Academy Awards.
